Course Overview

This course is designed to provide educators, school administrators, and policymakers with effective strategies to prevent early school dropout and support at-risk students. Participants will explore the key risk factors that contribute to school disengagement and learn proactive intervention methods to keep students motivated and engaged in their education. Throughout this five-day program, the course will focus on mentoring, personalized learning approaches, family and community engagement, and extracurricular activities as key tools for dropout prevention. Special emphasis will be placed on the teacher's role in building strong relationships with students and creating a positive, inclusive school environment that fosters learning and growth.

Participants will also examine successful European best practices and case studies to understand how different educational systems tackle dropout prevention. By the end of the course, they will be equipped with practical tools and long-term strategies to implement within their schools and institutions.

This course is ideal for teachers, school counselors, education professionals, and policy-makers who aim to reduce dropout rates, improve student engagement, and create a more supportive and motivating learning environment.
